PRE-ORDER ANNOUNCEMENTS - SPRING 2025

PRE-ORDER DUE DATE:
FRIDAY JUNE 27TH 2025

May 2025

Dear O Scale Model Railroader,

Welcome to the Atlas O Premier Catalog, Spring 2025 Edition. This catalog features O Scale Master, Premier and Trainman locomotives and rolling stock. Stay tuned throughout the year for additional catalogs featuring all Atlas' offered scales!

Catalogs such as this one are the basis of Atlas' distinctive pre-order system. Before the Research & Development department gives the final go ahead for production, Atlas announces to its customers the products we are preparing to make. This announcement comes in the form of our Atlas Model (HO & N) and Atlas O Premier Catalogs that provide our customers with the opportunity to arrange pre-orders if placed by the given deadline. If possible, Atlas will try to fill orders placed after a given deadline, but these cannot be guaranteed. Occasionally, we offer 'Limited Availability' products for which we have speculated on order quantities and therefore these orders cannot be guaranteed. Either way, its best to place orders as soon as possible for your best chances at acquiring a selected product.

This catalog includes opportunities to reserve select Pre-Order Premier Locomotives as well as Master & Premier rolling stock. Atlas O continues the expansion of the O locomotive line with offerings of the New Premier ET44 and E6 Locomotives, as well as Premier SD40-2 Locomotives. All of these locomotive offerings will come equipped with MTH DCS, Proto-Sound 3.0!

This catalog also includes the release of several rolling stock models in the Master and Premier lines including: Streamlined Passenger Cars, 40' PS-1 Box Cars, Trinity 5161 Covered Hoppers, various flat cars and more - with authentic prototypical paint schemes.

Last, but not least, this announcement brochure serves as a reminder to all our customers, of the extensive line of Atlas O track, accessories, trackside buildings, and other structures that Atlas O has available on a day to day basis. Whether you're rehabilitating an existing layout, or building one from scratch, Atlas O customer service and sales representatives are ready to assist you in whatever way we can to make your layout a reality.

Atlas O Catalog-Tariff Based Pricing Notice - The prices shown in this catalog are based on the current U.S. tariff rate of 30% on imports from China. Should this rate change prior to product arrival, final pricing may be adjusted—either upward or downward—based on the tariff rate in effect at the time of importation. Atlas understands that evolving tariffs affect every part of the supply chain—from production and logistics to wholesale and retail pricing. We are committed to minimizing those effects whenever possible, including absorbing increased costs where feasible to support long-term relationships and preserve market stability.

We encourage all customers—dealers, distributors, and consumers—to continue placing orders and pre-orders knowing that Atlas is actively managing the impact of tariff changes. For updates on trade policy and industry advocacy, visit the Hobby Industry Coalition at hobbycoalition.org, an initiative proudly supported by Atlas.

The Wabtec ET44AC (Evolution Series Tier 4, AC traction) is a high-horsepower diesel-electric locomotive built by Wabtec Corporation (formerly GE Transportation) to meet the stringent EPA Tier 4 emissions standards. It is part of GE's Evolution Series (GEVO) and is designed to replace the ES44AC, featuring enhanced fuel efficiency and lower emissions.

There are several variations of the ET44AC, such as the ET44C4 ordered by BNSF. The ET44C4 comes with 4 traction motors instead of the common 6. The middle axles of the ET44C4 are operated by computer control for weight distribution purposes.

On a warm summer afternoon in Palmer Lake, Colorado Atlas' own Cody Booker caught BNSF ET44C4 #3792 snaking north towards Denver leading a good-sized mixed freight. The commotion of the BNSF ET44C4 locomotive briefly interrupts the game of disc golf in the background.

Offering better reliability and lower maintenance costs than the higher powered SD-45, EMD's SD40-2 enjoyed a long production run of 3,100 units. The 3,000 horsepower diesel was the primary motive power for many railroads throughout the 1970's and 80's. Introduced on January 1, 1972, the SD40-2 had become the best-selling 6-axle road switcher in history by December 31, 1978. One of the most striking features of the EMD workhorse was its long "back porch" or decking that extended in front and behind the locomotive's cab. These porches differentiated the SD40-2 from its earlier cousin, the SD35 and were the result of the SD40-2's requirement for a longer frame, which helped increase the locomotive's tractive effort.

CSX and Conrail SD40-2s are a perfect complement to the James E. Strates Carnival train (pages 34-37), and were regularly assigned to moving this iconic piece of American History during the performing season from winter quarters in Florida throughout the Eastern Seaboard and Northeastern states.

The 1930s represented a new era of optimism and technological progress in the United States. This was reflected in both the arts and in industrial design, where the Art Deco influence – subdued during the Great Depression – was transformed into the Streamline Moderne style. Everything from buildings to automobiles to railroad passenger cars began to move away from a dependence on vertical shapes and geometric designs toward a much more horizontal, curved style featuring modern materials such as welded (not riveted) stainless steel which emphasized power through speed, not solidity. Thus was born the era of the Great Streamliners: the Union Pacific M-10000, the Burlington Zephyrs, and of course the Electro-Motive Corporation's E Series of road diesels. EMC had produced several "covered wagon" E designs through the 1930s (EA through E5), but in relatively limited numbers. In 1939, the 2000 horsepower E-6 was the first (and, interestingly, the last before becoming the Electro-Motive Division of General Motors) to be produced in mass quantities, totaling 91 A units and 26 B units produced between November of 1939 and September of 1942, when production of new locomotives was halted due to the War Effort. These featured the now iconic streamlined slant-nose and aerodynamic surfaces and were matched with the new streamlined passenger train sets produced by Pullman Standard and Budd for the famous name trains such as the Union Pacific "City" trains, the Illinois Central "Panama Limited", and the Milwaukee Road "Hiawathas".

The 1930's ushered in a "sea change" in the concept of passenger car design. As the United States was striving to come out of the Great Depression, images of renewed power and progress became those of speed, technical innovation, and forward motion exemplified by the Streamline Moderne school of industrial design. Aerodynamic shapes such as horizontal fluting and rounded or curved surfaces made of smooth, bright materials such as welded and polished stainless steel began to replace the staid and solid concepts that had governed passenger car designs since the turn of the century. While safe, smooth riding, and often quite luxurious, the riveted side framing and cover plates and massive steel underframes (supporting a floor of poured concrete in most cases) could cause a typical "Heavyweight" passenger car to weigh as much as 1 ton per linear foot!

The "Streamliners", by contrast, eliminated heavy underframes and adopted methods of construction where the entire car body and roof contributed to the structural integrity - much the same as what is now referred to as "unibody" construction. The use of lighter materials both inside and out also contributed to these cars weighing as much as 20-25 tons less than that of a comparable heavyweight. Gleaming aluminum fixtures, cut and frosted glass, and even decorative celluloids replaced the dark woods and veneers and heavy cast iron and brass fittings heretofore common to car interiors - further reducing weight and contributing to a modern, glamorous style which was readily accepted by the traveling public. The lighter designs proved to be much more economical as well and were adopted by Pullman-Standard and a newcomer to passenger car design - the Budd Company of Philadelphia.

Since 1913, Budd was a well-known supplier of auto body stampings but by 1930, rapidly became a major force in railroad passenger car design. Budd was among the first to grasp the potential of stainless steel, however the inability of stainless steel to be fabricated with normal welding techniques was an issue. Budd's chief engineer, Colonel Earl J.W. Ragsdale, spent five years developing the key process needed to make stainless into a viable structural material: the patented Shotweld electric welding process. From the groundbreaking Pioneer Zephyrs in 1934 through the Amfleets of the 1980s, Budd-designed cars have carved out a unique and lasting legacy which carries on today in cars produced by Bombardier.

The Atlas cars are based on Budd designs and feature:

The 40' Boxcar is widely known as one of the most popular freight cars used by railroads as they transitioned from steam to diesel. In particular the Pullman Standard or PS-1 design was one of the most popular and was widely used by North American railroads. Pullman had been making freight cars for more than half a century when it hit a home run with the PS-1. Introduced in 1947, it set the standard for postwar American freight cars.

What made the PS-1 a landmark was its welded construction – an area in which Pullman led the industry. In addition to lighter weight, welding offered superior strength and better resistance to weather and corrosion than contemporary riveted cars.

Like the EMD diesels that became ubiquitous on American railroads, the PS-1 was part of the postwar shift away from customized, railroad-specific locos and cars toward standardized designs produced in large quantities on efficient assembly lines. No wonder the PS-1 was soon followed by the highly successful PS-2 covered hopper, PS-3 open hopper, PS-4 flatcar, and PS-5 gondola.

In 1995, Trinity Industries introduced a new center-sill design covered hopper car designed primarily for grain transport. The new design was visually quite different - this one featured curved sides versus previously familiar rib-sided design adopted from Pullman-Standard. The new 5161 cubic-foot capacity design along with the recently introduced allowable 286,000 lbs GRL (Gross Rail Loading) brought a new standard to the industry (Trinity's competition were ACF and Thrall).

Initial deliveries went to Trinity's leasing component and to ADM Transportation, a large private company heavily invested in grain products. Within months, deliveries to the other "grain" companies began rolling down the steel rails. Eventually, the traditional grain railroads jumped in on the game with BNSF leading the pack. The 5161 grain variants have long trough hatches usually broken into sections for easy opening. The outlets on grain cars are usually gravity-only and vary by manufacturer. Fixed shaker brackets can be found on the hopper sides. However, not all the 5161s are for grain-products. BNSF has a good-sized fleet of cars used for sugar transport that feature round-hatches in elongated hatches, gravity-pneumatic gates and have special interior lining. Other variations include round-hatch only cars for chemical transport and cars being used for the potash and fertilizer industry.

Currently, the design is still in production with over 27,000 units being delivered and this model stands as being the most popular grain car in today's market.

One of the backbone cars of our country's intermodal service fleet, Atlas O's model accurately portrays the prototype. Based upon ACF cars built throughout the late 1960s and 1970s, these cars lasted in the North American railcar pool for many years. As the advent of articulating spine cars became more popular, these cars began to be replaced in COFC service. These cars could later be found in various services, such as maintenance of way, military, and hauling various sizes of loads, and can still be seen doing that today.

In the freight car world cars are often referred to by their capacity. So the flat car with no bulkheads is called the 68' flat, while the bulkhead cars are called 62' bulkheads.

All New Exclusive Paint Schemes

The James E. Strates Shows entered the new millennium as one of the largest traveling outdoor amusement companies in North America and the only carnival still operating its own dedicated train. From March to November, Strates Shows traveled proudly along the Eastern Seaboard with its distinctive 55-car train, easily identifiable by its vibrant coaches painted in white, orange, and teal. In the mid-2000s, according to Amusement Business, an industry trade magazine, the company ranked third in attendance among carnivals operating at the 50 largest fairs in North America. At its three largest fairs—the North Carolina State Fair in Raleigh, the Erie County Fair in Hamburg, New York, and the New York State Fair in Syracuse—Strates Shows attracted nearly 2.7 million visitors to its midway.

At that time, the Strates Shows train comprised 45 flat cars that transported around 50 amusement rides along with necessary support equipment. Additionally, nine passenger coaches, named after fairs on the route, provided housing for over 100 workers and senior staff. A stainless-steel fluted baggage car functioned as a generator car, supplying independent power to the passenger coaches. When rail lines were not adjacent to fairgrounds, company-operated buses transported employees back and forth.

Many of the coaches utilized by the Strates train during this era were previously part of the Royal American Shows train and were acquired at auction in 1999.

The James E. Strates Shows entered the new millennium as one of the largest traveling outdoor amusement companies in North America and the only carnival still operating its own dedicated train. From March to November, Strates Shows traveled proudly along the Eastern Seaboard with its distinctive 55-car train, easily identifiable by its vibrant coaches painted in white, orange, and teal. In the mid-2000s, according to Amusement Business, an industry trade magazine, the company ranked third in attendance among carnivals operating at the 50 largest fairs in North America. At its three largest fairs—the North Carolina State Fair in Raleigh, the Erie County Fair in Hamburg, New York, and the New York State Fair in Syracuse—Strates Shows attracted nearly 2.7 million visitors to its midway.

At that time, the Strates Shows train comprised 45 flat cars that transported around 50 amusement rides along with necessary support equipment. Additionally, nine passenger coaches, named after fairs on the route, provided housing for over 100 workers and senior staff. A stainless-steel fluted baggage car functioned as a generator car, supplying independent power to the passenger coaches. When rail lines were not adjacent to fairgrounds, company-operated buses transported employees back and forth.

Celebrating its 102nd anniversary in 2025, Strates Shows remains a family-owned and operated outdoor amusement and carnival enterprise headquartered in Orlando, Florida. The company was originally founded in 1923 as Southern Tier Shows in Elmira, New York, by Greek immigrant James E. Strates. It has since grown into one of America's leading providers of carnival midways, food concessions, and games. In 1934, Strates Shows transitioned into a railroad-based carnival following the acquisition of its first five flat cars. Utilizing rail transportation allowed the company to significantly expand beyond its New York base, bringing entertainment to major fairs across the Eastern Seaboard. By the late 1950s, the carnival's train had expanded to over 50 cars. After Royal American Shows ceased rail operations in 1982, Strates Shows became the last remaining railroad-based traveling carnival. This unique status was further solidified in 2017 when Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus ended their historic circus train operations, leaving Strates Shows as the final entertainment show traveling by rail in the United States. At the conclusion of the 2019 season, Strates Shows had planned to continue its rail tradition into the summer of 2020. However, the COVID-19 pandemic led to restrictions on large gatherings and the temporary closure of the fair industry, causing the show to remain inactive. As fairs began reopening in 2021 under reduced capacity restrictions, operating a 45-car train became economically impractical. Consequently, the company transitioned to transporting its attractions by truck, serving fairs from Florida to Vermont. In 2025, Strates Shows officially ended its historic railroad operations with a final train arrival at the Erie County Fair in Hamburg, New York (Buffalo), marking its complete transition to an all-truck carnival.
